

Need help? Don't panic

Oh boy! You must really need help. Still, no worries, you're on the right web site.

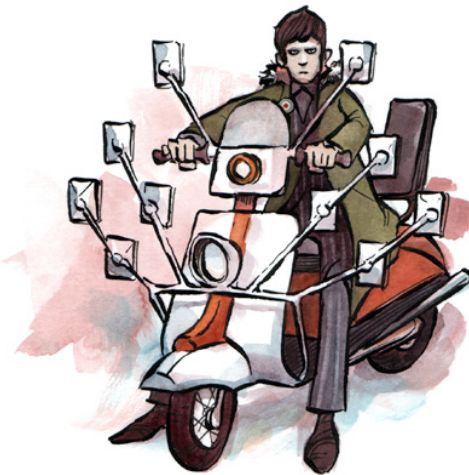

Stuff and Nonsense is a small, but popular web design studio, founded and led by designer and author Andy Clarke. We have built an enviable reputation for creating highly effective web sites, e-commerce stores and web applications for our clients who now include local, national and international companies, organizations and government bodies.

We make sites that are visually engaging, use technologies appropriately, have high levels of accessibility and that satisfy the needs of the people that use them.

We focus on making simple, useable and attractive sites using web standards technologies including XHTML and CSS; heck, we even wrote a book about it, Transcending CSS: The Fine Art of Web Design.
